

WOMAN HELD HERE. BARES MAIL THEFTS

Husband of Mrs. Clark Yale and His "Pal" Await Extradition to Capital.

story which the police say the woman told, Yale was robbing the mails of scores of letters. Her story is that her husband would await the arrival of mail wagons at night in front of fashionable apartment houses, and then, at the mail carrier entered the apartment to collect mail from boxes, ordinarily some distance from the front door, he would grab handfuls of the letters and packages and hasten home with them.

Would Extract Checks.

In detail, the police say, Mrs. Yale told how Yale, while he was operating alone, would bring in the letters and packages, and throw them on the dining room table of their luxurious apartment. He then would sit down, she is alleged to have said, and open the letters, saving what checks and money he found.

Several arrests were made and for a while it was thought that the guilty parties had been apprehended, but scores of complaints continued to pile in.

Went To Roslyn.

Several days previous to the removal of the Yales from Washington the incidents which eventually led to their arrest occurred. A man giving the name of Edward White appeared at a Roslyn, Va., bank, and deposited a check drawn by a Washington firm to the credit of E. F. Caldwell & Company, a New York City concern, and alleged to have represented himself to be E. F. Caldwell.

The bank learned that the signers of the check had an account and that the check was good. White drew out $300 and left the remainder on deposit.

A day later two women gave checks for $20 and $25, respectively, on the account of the Roslyn Bank. It had developed in the meantime that the Caldwell check had been stolen from the mails. Investigation by the police led to the arrest of a woman relative of the man who had deposited the check.

It was this woman who had had one of the checks cashed in a department store. She was questioned at Police Headquarters and satisfied the authorities that she was innocent.

Police Took Time.

Sufficient information, however, was obtained from the woman to put the police on the trail of the Yales and the couple finally was located in New York several days ago. The police bided their time until they were sure they could accomplish the arrest of Yale, his wife, and Carey before they descended on the apartment at 1048 Lexington avenue.

An hour after the raid on the apartment the woman was on her way to this city in the custody of Detective Burlingame, and Yale and Carey were at New York police headquarters. Yale, the police say, had been known in New York under the names of John Halm and George Atwood.

Since giving up his apartment at the Lexington and going to New York, the police say, visited this city in company with Carey and spent a day here obtaining check books from various Washington banks. Carey, according to the authorities, has confessed that he had stolen the names of several prominent Washingtonians, which they forged to large checks and deposited in banks in Island City, N. Y. On the accounts established by these checks, the police say, the men plotted to draw checks.

"The banks would have been taken off their guard by this scheme," Detective Burlingame today, "when the head of a department store called up to inquire if such a person as the one on whom the check was drawn had drawn the bank cashier would answer yes."

Arrested in 1907.

"Of course there was such an account in the bank and time had not been given to ascertain if the check deposited as the account was good or bad. It is impossible to say at present how much these people obtained by their operations."

In 1907, Yale, with accomplices, the police say, was arrested in Boston for mail robbery. The men had keys to mail boxes, and, in letter carriers' uniforms, stole whatever money letters contained and cashed checks they found.

Yale was sentenced to five years, but since he got out of the Massachusetts prison had not been in the hands of the police until yesterday.

Through St. Louis banks the Pinkertons have been apprised that letters from that city to firms in Washington have gone astray, and Washington firms have made similar complaints.

Carey is accused of cashing a check sent to a Princeton student by his mother, and showing the mother's letter to identify him.

Yale and his wife are held on charges of larceny and grand larceny. The police of several cities and the postal authorities are still engaged in investigating the operations of the trio, and are leaving no stone unturned in their endeavor to run down Edward White, the man who made the Roslyn bank deposit.

Mule a Sure Shot.

IOIA, Kan., Feb. 17.—Manipulating his weapons of defense with wonderful dexterity a Kansas mule kicked back a stone which Ben Wright, a Carlyle farmer, had thrown at him. The stone struck Wright's chin and severely injured him. Neighbors are urging the mule's owner to exhibit the animal's dexterity at the county fair this summer. He is undecided, because his chin still hurts.
